Senator Caraway Introduces Resolution Providing for Investigation of Practices of Senators Who Vote on Questions Where They Are Financially Interested

Washington, August 7.—When Senator Wadsworth, recently, objected to the consideration of the Caraway resolution providing for an inquiry as to the pecuniary pocketbooks of those senators, it might have been assumed that tariff talk had become so far along in the way of discussion, or movement, which a decision to go forward upon the proposal was not a disagreeable exception to both partisans in both houses and would do did his voice more damage. It possible when himself with the forces of corruption which believe that "the road of duty" of officials are still here and that a man can exists amidst the members of the Senate itself.

Again Senator Caraway has rendered the people of the country a great service by bringing out into the light the fact that wealthy gentlemen sit in the senate and brazenly vote in matters in which they have a direct pecuniary interest. For a judge to sit on the bench to try his own case would very properly bring swift impeachment, and senators so voting tariff rates on their own products are equally indecent and shameless. The great Jefferson who said with fine clearness and precision against the various concoctions which would wise rule the case in his Manual of Parliamentary Procedure, which has for more than a century been accepted as a guide for both house and senate and in each congress reprinted for the use of the members. He said: "When the private interests of members are concerned in a bill or question, he is to withdraw. And where such an interest has appeared, his voice has been disallowed even after a division. In a case so contrary, not only to the laws of decency, but to the fundamental principle of social compact which denies to any man to be a judge in his own cause, it is for the pride of the house that the rule of momental observance should be strictly adhered to."

When Senator Caraway rose to introduce his resolution providing for an inquiry to determine if senators had been voting on the interests of their own business occupations, he stood from an editorial in the New York Herald, a Republican newspaper which had been shocked out of its partition by the attitude of the so-called senators as they will be known hereafter. Senator Caraway did not read the names of his senators but the Herald referred to Sen. of Utah, Warren of Wyoming, Gooding of Idaho, Stanfield of Oregon, Bursum of New Mexico, Cameron of Arizona and Oldie of Nevada. And every mother's son of them a Republican of the inner circle. Their brazen votes constituted the majority by which a great burden of wool taxes was fastened on the hundred million Americans who use articles made of wool.

Had they possessed the decency to decline to vote in a matter where the interests of their own pocketbooks are alleged to have been involved, the high wool tariff rates would have been defeated and untold millions would be saved to the people in those unseen but deeply felt indirect taxes whichs unscrupulously ease upward the selling price of every article into which wool enters or is, even alleged to enter, whether the article is made abroad and shipped here, or whether it is made here and the price fixed under the protective wing of the high import duty.

BREWSTER AND REED
NON-PARTIAL NOMINATES

Reed Receives Approximately 50,000 Republican Votes, Giving Him a Majority of 6000 Republicans Nominate Machine Man

The primary election is past a thins of the past, and the parties have all made their nominations of their respective candidates, so far as candidates offering themselves in the primaries are concerned. The contest for the democratic nomination for governor was a close contest at the campaign. Senator James A. Reed of Brookings, Long had the highest fight for nomination of all and all candidates' results made over Long was above 6,000. It is intended that Reed received about 50,000 Republican votes, to which he was not legally under the primary law entitled. Had the D. P. been not voted for Reed in the primary, Long would have been nominated by more than 10,000. Long had strong reasons to make claim to, but he has passed a statement he wouldn't contest, therefore Reed will remain the nominee of the Democratic party. The next move on the part of the Woodrow Wilson Democrats of the state of Missouri will be to have the Democratic State committee reaffirm the Democratic platform of two years ago, both state and national. This must be done in order to hold the off-line Democrats in line on the whole ticket. The Democrats will not be anxious to Reed during the platform as they cannot tell what kind of a mess he would get them into, should he set in harmony with his contentions during the past four or five years. There is some talk of an independent ticket being placed in the field by the county of St. Louis. A great cry of election fraud is going up from that county.

R. R. Brewster is the Republican nominee for U. S. senator. He is considered the choice of Gov. Hayes' political machine. Many Republicans are talking of voting for Reed. We shall see about that matter later on in November. The Democrats of this county will make an independent ticket next Wednesday. They will elect delegates next Tuesday in the different townships.

On motion a motion was made to nominate the various candidates for the various offices, and the following, after which the following business was transacted.

One of the most terrible railroad wrecks in the history of Missouri and one of the worst from a standpoint of casualties in the history of the state occurred on August 16, 1922, at Sulphur Springs, Mo., when the engine locomotive and train derailed and ran into the rear of the passenger train, killing 22 passengers and 12 engineers and conductors.

No 32 had stopped for water and Engineer Johnson, who was reading his orders, ran past the danger signal.

Cashier will produce much safety although there is time that it is believed to make that the no. 32 was not caused.

The roof coaches of No. 32 were over a trestle and when struck fell into the creek bed fifty feet below.

Conductor Gregg of the Flyer said he was in the baggage coach and had he known there was a train ahead of them he could have been on the lookout. He says he had no orders to pass No. 32.

An inquiry is being held at Decatur to determine the cause of the wreck.

Ed Tindale, fireman on the Flyer, said that the black signals were no working but the signal tower operator refused his testimony claiming his signals were set.
